Picture Rescue is the application that will help you retrieve all photos that have been accidentally deleted from your SD card. The app will scan your SD card and you can choose to restore the images that have not already been saved in the main folders. Are you a photographer or videographer who uses a camera that has a rugged case? If so, you probably won't want to take the case off - but you might not know you can run into trouble if you do. For example, what if your camera fails to charge for no apparent reason? A lot of rugged cases, especially those made by CamelBak, have a side pocket for your power adapter. But what happens if the adapter accidentally falls out of the pocket? Maybe you had a few dozen reams of coated paper in the corner of the room with your backup copy of a client's info? The power outlet did not quite fit, and the case was acting up. Or maybe it was a laptop bag that got bashed into something soft and you now have a damaged motherboard. The issue can get pretty serious, and a lot of camera manufacturers will offer products that mitigate it. Nikon, for example, has a bevy of accessories that are aimed at addressing the issue. The HN-P10 Power Pack is one of them, and it's our first look at what the pack does. Nikon's HN-P10 Power Pack Build and Design The HN-P10 is a short, cylindrical power pack that plugs into your camera's power port. The plug slides in at the bottom and is threaded, so you can use it with almost any type of Nikon camera. The pack measures 1.4 by 1.7 by 1.9 inches, weighs 3.6 ounces, and is made of a sturdy rubberized nylon. If you have a Nikon D5200 and a Z-Mount bracket for it, the pack should fit right into the bracket, and be removable from it. There's a thread in the middle of the pack that can be used to hang it on a handlebar bag or a basket. The pack has a few connection ports, and you can expect to find a Micro USB power cable at the top that you can use to charge your camera while you're using the pack. You can also use the pack to charge your camera's battery or to power a mobile device that you use with your Nikon. You

Miho is apparently a "quiet" girl. I could name three times that she tells someone a lie (e.g. to the guy who runs the "Cave Rescue" camp), but in every other case it seems like her reaction is silence, either silence (at times), or simply a look in the direction of the person who made a mistake. This is in contrast to other anime, such as One Piece
